

The hop given by the First regiment band last Friday evening, while not being the financial success that was expected, was a decidedly enjoyable affair. The crowd, however, was by no means a small one, and everyone remained until a late hour. The music provided by the twenty-six musicians was beautiful, to say the least, and this alone was well worth the small admission price. During the evening it was announced that the organization would give two more dances before the close of the season, when large crowds are expected.

The signal corps was inspected by Lieutenant Colonel H. M. H. Lund last Friday evening and passed through the ordeal very favorably. The inspection thus far has included the "school of" the national guard in general, was before the senate last week. The prevailing opinion is that the measure will teaching physical culture, I find there are only two exercises necessary to the development of the chest, bust, arms and lungs; and that, if persisted in, they will surely, in a very short time, are only two exercises necessary to the development of the chest, bust, arms and lungs; and that, if persisted in, they will surely, in a very short time, are only two exercises necessary to the development of the chest, bust, arms and lungs; and that, if persisted in, they will surely, in a very short time, are only two exercises necessary to the development of the chest, bust, arms and lungs; and that, if persisted in, they will surely, in a very short time, are only two exercises necessary to the development of the chest, bust, arms and lungs; and that, if persisted in, they will surely, in a very short time, leading and lungs; and that, if persisted in, they will surely, in a very short tim Company H will in a few days have the best appearing quarters in the guard. The company has two rooms, one of which is being fitted out in a very artistic manner. The furnishings of last year's club rooms are being used, the carpet of which alone cost $75.

The officers of the guard are at presnt diligently studying the latest cata ogues on military equipment, and be-fore the first of the year a number of the new regulation uniforms will be seen around the armory.

TO DEVELOP THE FORM.

Two Simple Exercises Benefiting the Figure and Carriage. (By a Teacher of Physical Culture in Kansas City Star.)

I wish every one could realize how easy it is to acquire a graceful carriage and a well developed figure.

In fact, you will have the true military carriage without knowing it—the body will incline slightly forward, the head erect, the abdomen straight. The whole body will be in harmony, and

This is all, but the secret is in not your movements will be easier than you ever thought possible.

I find that where such a multitude of exercises are given they are not satisfactory, and are not repeated often enough to be of any practical value. But these two little exercises are so easy to remember and so easy to ac-complish that all who heed them will find they are a pleasure instead of a

First Exercise—This exercise must be practiced slowly especially at first, and for a few minutes only, not until the muscles are sore.

Begin by noticing how the clock ticks, and learn to use that for your timer—two ticks a second. Stand in the usual position for calisthenics, that is, with the heels touching at an angle of about forty-five degrees, lips closed or about forty-live degrees, lips closed and arms hanging down at sides. Do not try to stand straight, but in your usual manner. Depend upon the exercise to straighten you.

Bring the hands up in front of the chest, palms outward and thumbs touching.

Now (standing perfectly still) imagine you are pushing something from ine you are pushing something from you, and push both hands forward as far as the arms can reach, while the clock ticks eight times. On the ninth tick begin to separate the hands, and at the twelfth tick they should be at the sides, just as you started.

This is all—but to repeat for clearness: Count four ticks while raising hands again to chest; eight till they begin to separate, and four till at the sides. Repeat this over and over; do not wait for the clock to tick between times, but raise hands again imme-

This is all, but the secret is in not pushing too hard. I find that nearly every one who has tried this movement pushes as if she were trying to move several hundred pounds, while it should be as if it were something very light, say a haby buggy with a good-sized say a baby buggy with a good-sized child in it.

Practice about five minutes. chest will swell out, the collar bones sink almost out of sight, the shoulders fall downward and backward, and the blood begin to circulate noticeably. Do not strain any muscles; ali move ments must be gentle.

Second Exercise-Stand as in the first exercise. Allow the right hand to hang as if dead; raise it lazily, lightly touching the front of the body till above the head as far as the arm can reach. Then (the hand suddenly reabove the head as far as the arm can reach. Then (the hand suddenly regaining life) point straight upwards. Then, with the pointing hand, describe a curve backward as far as the arm can reach without straining muscles. The elbow must not be bent during this backward curve.

Repeat four times with the right hand, then four times with the left hand, alternating for about five minutes. Do all this slowly and gently, I would not try to count until I

I would not try to count until I learned to do this movement with ease. Then count eight while raising learned to do this more relative to the count eight while raising the devitalized hand over the head; on the eighth count the fingers point upward. Count eight while describing the backward curve. On the eighth count the hand hangs at the side, as at first.

Repeat each of these exercises five minutes daily, making only ten minutes daily, Why Pat Did Not Vote.

A solicitor's cierk was collecting evidence of cierical intimidation of voters in a certain constituency in Ireland.

He had questioned many voters without cliciting anything of much importance, until he came to an old man who had not voted.

"And why did you not vote?" asked the cierk.

had not voted.

"And why did you not vote?" asked the clerk.

"Well, then, sor," was the reply, "it was all his rivirence's doing."

"Ah, his reverence," said the clerk, brightening up. "What did he do to prevent you?"

"I was working in the yard," said the old man, "when he suddenly burst into it and chased me into the barn, and kept me there until it was too late to vote."

"And are you ready to swear that his reverence forcibly prevented you from voting?" asked the clerk.

"I am, sor," was the reply, "and there are others who can swear to it, too."

"That's sufficient," said the clerk. "I have not time to go into particulars now, but there will be a gentleman here in a few days to whom you can tell everything."

So important was old Pat's evidence
